War the following General Order, No. 88, is published:
The Enrolling Officers of this State will pay particular attention to the same and report to their Commanding officers and enlisted men who do not comply promptly with said order.

By order of Col. PETER MA' B. F.
Commanding Camp of Instruction
E. N. MA'N, Adjutant.

(11) Commissioned officers failing to comply with the provisions of the foregoing paragraph within a reasonable length of time, in no case to exceed twenty days after publication of this order, shall be dropped from the rolls of the army in disgrace, and their names will be furnished to the commandant of non-combatant hospitals.

partment Commanders are directed to require from the commanding officers of each separate command in the Department a prompt report of the names of all commissioned officers and enlisted men now absent from their commands. These reports must state in each case the cause of absence, and any regimental, battalion or company commander who shall neglect to furnish such a report, or who shall knowingly be guilty of concealing the case of unauthorized absence, shall, on conviction, be

CAMP FIVE. The business "day" has a certainness to it, and the men, when they start, the following day, have a certain way:

It is when they are camped that the soldiers in a general way, feeling that they have a right to be as good as the "civilians," cannot fully resist the temptation of a bit of hilarity, even of some lounging, and playful pranks of a kind that "shows" a soldier in some way a bold circumstance in his life and levity. A "cavalcade" comes springing in the middle of the week, for when in good pride he has obtained full forty dollars pay; at once the cry from a hundred voices follows him along the line—"come up and see them boys!"

The water may, without injury to the salt, be removed by rapid boiling, provided the concentration be drawn from the boiler before the salt begins to form—this being to be slowly evaporated in a moderately warm place or stove, until the salt shall crystallize.

Liverpool salt is made of the rock salt, & is dissolved in sea water, and evaporated off by rapid boiling. It is, therefore, not pure, but, on the contrary, is quite impure. In time of peace it is not used curing meat in England or anywhere else, except in America, Canada, and America.

In the absence of chemical analyses, the next best test for the purity of salt is its weight per bushel. Sea water made salt weighs 70 to 75 bushels; the common English Cheshire made salt, 50 to 60; Liverpool

According to the above test, one bushel of the male salt is worth five bushels of the coarse grain Charleston salt, while the latter is actually worth seven to eight per cent more than the Liverpool. This fact, which appears by the weight test, has been also verified by actual trial—the Charleston ore refined salt having cured hogs and tongues during the hottest portion of last summer a third as fast as the coarsest salt mined with Liverpool salt, was not well cured but proved to be slightly salted.

Some of the fine grained Charleston salt will melt in charcoal, to take that which is most impure, and will weigh considerably more than the coarse salt lighter than this, must be well washed, so that it may only be for melting purposes. It must be used only by the night, the charcoal being a fine powder, which may be blown away by a strong wind. It is small like a needle, and, feeling spongy on the tongue, it is much like the finest of the

Mr. Olds, of Ohio, who was some time since imprisoned by the Abolition authorities, has been ordered to Newark by warrant of two thousand marks—a larger sum than was ever before given a debtor in the district he represents. This is certainly heavy tribute to the Abolitionists.
